

2025-26 National Budget and the Stylized Facts of the Indian Economy Dr. Arun Kumar Director, Institute for Economic Studies University of Delhi

Introduction: The Indian economy, the largest in the world by GDP, is a rapidly growing and diversified economy. It is a major power in the world economy and a key player in the global financial system. The Indian economy is characterized by a high growth rate, a large and growing middle class, and a strong and growing services sector. The Indian economy is also characterized by a high level of inequality, a large and growing informal sector, and a high level of corruption. The Indian economy is a complex and dynamic system, and it is important to understand its structure and functioning in order to make informed decisions about its future.

The Indian economy is a large and complex system, and it is important to understand its structure and functioning in order to make informed decisions about its future. The Indian economy is characterized by a high growth rate, a large and growing middle class, and a strong and growing services sector. The Indian economy is also characterized by a high level of inequality, a large and growing informal sector, and a high level of corruption. The Indian economy is a complex and dynamic system, and it is important to understand its structure and functioning in order to make informed decisions about its future. The Indian economy is a large and complex system, and it is important to understand its structure and functioning in order to make informed decisions about its future. The Indian economy is characterized by a high growth rate, a large and growing middle class, and a strong and growing services sector. The Indian economy is also characterized by a high level of inequality, a large and growing informal sector, and a high level of corruption. The Indian economy is a complex and dynamic system, and it is important to understand its structure and functioning in order to make informed decisions about its future.

The Indian economy is a large and complex system, and it is important to understand its structure and functioning in order to make informed decisions about its future. The Indian economy is characterized by a high growth rate, a large and growing middle class, and a strong and growing services sector. The Indian economy is also characterized by a high level of inequality, a large and growing informal sector, and a high level of corruption. The Indian economy is a complex and dynamic system, and it is important to understand its structure and functioning in order to make informed decisions about its future. The Indian economy is a large and complex system, and it is important to understand its structure and functioning in order to make informed decisions about its future. The Indian economy is characterized by a high growth rate, a large and growing middle class, and a strong and growing services sector. The Indian economy is also characterized by a high level of inequality, a large and growing informal sector, and a high level of corruption. The Indian economy is a complex and dynamic system, and it is important to understand its structure and functioning in order to make informed decisions about its future.

